

HYDRO ONE INTERROGATORY #6

INTERROGATORY

In paragraph 29, Wirebury asserts that the Board's objectives include that the Board must "provide consumers with non-discriminatory access to distribution systems". Please elaborate on the basis for Wirebury's interpretation of non-discriminatory access being applicable to customer connections to distribution wires systems (as distinct from access to competitive commodity markets through distribution wires systems)? In doing so, please make particular reference to the Act and the policy documents that shaped the Act, such as the White Paper ("Direction for Change", 1997) and the Macdonald Committee Report ("A Framework for Competition", 1996)?

RESPONSE

Please see Wirebury's response to Hydro One's interrogatory, Ex. J12, T8, S5.
