Dear Sir:

I have been reading the information page bulletins regarding the Time Of Use Metering Proposals. In one recommendation they were limiting the Time Of Use Meters Companies had to have 10,000 in use for any consideration.

Our Company, D.G. Henderson & Associates Ltd. has been in the electronic business for 30 years and developed a Time Of Use Meter in the early 90's and tested it in London. However, I could find no interest from Utilities at that time for this meter addition. Since our design requires no change to the existing meter, it is not only unique, but will significantly save in installation costs and added features.

Is there a deadline that I have to meet in order to not be eliminated from introducing this new meter when features and functions are all defined by the OEB that allows me to be a meter supplier to the industry.

Dale G. Henderson, P. Eng,
